Base Ball.

The match game of base ball played here, yesterday, between the Ottawa Club and the first nine of the Ogdensburg Club, resulted in favor of Ogdensburg, by a score of 141 to 20.

In explanation it is proper to say that the Ottawa boys were not well posted on the rules of the game, and consequently missed making several tallies, and also got out several times when they should have avoided it.

They have, however, good material to make base ball players, and will do better next time. Their pitcher and catcher are as good as the average, and all will do well when they understand the game better. They did not come boasting, but requested the privilege of coming to learn the game. Another year we shall expect to see them a match for the best.

Rev. J. H. VINCENT at GOVERNOUR.—Rev. J. H. Vincent, of New York City, will give one of his unique and highly interesting lectures at Gouverneur on Friday evening, the 6th of September next; subject, "Sunday School Reform." On the following day a general Sunday School meeting will be held on the new fair grounds, in which the schools of this place, and those from surrounding charges, are respectfully invited to participate. Tables will be provided, and refreshments served, each school providing for its own. Prominent persons from abroad are expected to be present.

A. T. COPELAND, WM. WHITNEY, GOVERNOUR AUG. 29, 1867. Republican State Convention.

The Republican State Central Committee, which met at Albany on Thursday, decided upon the 26th of September as the day for holding the Republican State Convention. Syracuse was designated as the place, and the hour of the day, noon.

"Spot Him"—In 1861, Andrew Johnson, then in the United States Senate, said, "When you hear a man prating about the Constitution, spot him—he is a traitor!"

Nearly a third of President Johnson's reply to the straight forward reasons of General Grant why Sheridan should not be superseded, is a senseless "prating" about the Constitution. Spot him!

A fellow printer's devil says thus plaintively: "When Susie's arms her dog, I always wish my neck was his; how often would I stop and turn, to get a pat from hands like hers, and when she kisses the printer's nose, O don't I wish that I were those."

At Andersonville. The first thought that occurred to me when fairly inside was "How small! Can it be possible that thirty thousand men were ever thrust in here!" I believe there are twenty-seven acres in the enclosure, but I can only say that it seemed fearfully small. Just within the stockade are sheds that might possibly shelter one hundred men. There were put up, I believe, during the last four months of the prisoners' stay, and they were the only covering provided for the poor fellows, except what they scooped out with their own hands.

"And now with solemn and eager curiosity I glanced around, to take a general survey of the ground. An uneven piece of ground it is, sloping from both extremities toward the centre, where it is crossed by a little purling stream, at which thirty thousand dying soldiers lapped, or longed to lap. A large plot on both sides of the stream is marsh land, impossible to be used. Inside the stockade, and close at its foot, is a tolerably deep ditch, while portions of "the dead line" still remain, forming an inner circle. The ditch is grown up with flowers and ferns, many of them very pretty. I felt disposed to quarrel with the soil for producing such lovely things. Oh! how could it do so! Thomas and I strolled, with the deadly nightshade, should alone grow in the stockade at Andersonville! As I glanced around, my eye was met in every direction by those glaring sentry-boxes; and I felt that, had I been a prisoner, I should have delved into the earth if only to escape the relentless gaze of those pitiless guards. When once I cast my eyes on the ground, the fascination was so intense that I had difficulty in rising them again. Every spot I trod was consecrated, awfully consecrated, by sufferings and death. The ground was everywhere strewn with rags, old shoes, and bits of leather, washed into the soil by the rain and trampled in by feet. At every few paces, a little hillock or hole, told the story of how a man, accustomed to a New England or Western home, had learned to live in a space a trifle larger than a coffin."

"To be or not to be—that's the question." Whether to suffer with mental anguish, Frenzied lips, cranking pains, dyspeptic agonies, And nameless bodily suffering; Or whether, with sudden dash, Solve a bottle of Plantain Bitters, And, as Guther swears, be myself a man again. Guther said, my eyes were sallow, My eyes lagged, my breath tremendous bad— My disposition troublesome—in fact He gently hinted I was fast becoming Quite a nuisance. Four bottles now beneath my vest have disappeared, My food has relish, my appetite is keen, My step elastic, my mind brilliant, and Nine pounds, avoirdupois is added to my weight.

A gentleman of great medical knowledge says that a more genial wholesome and effectual tonic and appetizer than Drake's celebrated Plantation Bitters, was never discovered. He recommends it for Dyspepsia, for Liver Complaint, for Exhaustion, Weakness, for a want of Appetite, and for Mental Depression. It is an agreeable stimulant, and is equally adapted to young and old. Persons of sedentary habits, like clerical men, lawyers, merchants, and delicate females are particularly benefited by its use.

The military force here is not half equal to the demands, and unless some suitable commander is appointed, and can comprehend the true condition of the country, it is feared that many years will elapse before we will be relieved of Indian troubles and personal danger. The country is, however, constantly increasing in white population.
